

To my wife, Mary, whose unwavering love, support, and encouragement during the tumultuous ups and downs of a long selling career have made this book possible. Convincing her to say yes to my marriage proposal represents the most important sale I ever made.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

A special thank you to those who provided assistance in writing this book. With immense gratitude to these magnificent people for their support, ideas, hard work, creativity, encouragement, proofreading, editing, artistry, inspiration, and more:

| | | |
|--------------|----------------|----------------|
| Alice Adams | Michael Chiodi | Samuel O’Rear |
| Edward Adams | Thomas D’Amico | Amy Peltonen |
| Mary Adams | Michael Hills | Jeffrey Rains |
| Robert Adams | Blake Johnson | Marvin Slosman |
| Brian Battey | Joel Kinnan | Matthew Suggs |
| Peter Casey | Gregory Matre | |

...and to the thousands of customers, colleagues, and clients who have had a huge impact on this book by evidencing their trust in me during my sales career, sharing their stories, and joining me in my training workshops.

...and to our editor extraordinaire, Maija Rothenberg. Conscious of my literary weaknesses, I realized that hiring the right editor for this book was imperative. All the editors I interviewed were brightly starred, highly recommended, and experienced. Most, however, responded with the standard, “My fee is X dollars per word.” Only one shined immediately as a true and natural consultant. She took it upon herself to review parts of my manuscript, offering up observations and revised copy – no charge, no obligation. Just honest interest in my project. Maija immersed herself in sales theories, completely absorbed consultative selling concepts, and truly humanized my manuscript. She is an amazing individual and professional. Thank you, Maija.